And good morning or good afternoon to everyone. It is a pleasure to be here with you today. And before we move into the results, I would like to start by celebrating something very, very special. Can tell us 35th anniversary. As you may know, our story began back in 1990 with a deeply social purpose to empower people and their communities through financial inclusion. From the beginning, our mission has been clear to create social value, economic value, and also human value and support our people, clients and employees to foster the dreams. And over these 35 years, that purpose has only grown stronger. Today, we proudly serve more than 6 million clients, and over our history, we have reached more than 17 million people. That is a legacy built on trust, inclusion and sustainable growth. Now let's talk about our performance this quarter. Despite a complex global and regional environment both in Mexico and Peru, Gentera continues to deliver strong, high quality growth. By the end of the third quarter, our results are fully aligned with our guidance, which, by the way, you remember last quarter was updated and increased after a strong first half of the year. So let me share a few key highlights. Interest loan portfolio grew 16% year over year and our client base, including including end users, increased 11%. Portfolio quality remained solid, with NPLs at 3.4%, showing the strength of our business model and our discipline in the execution. In Mexico, Compartamos Peru Banco continues to perform exceptionally well. Portfolio grew 19% compared with last year and NPL stands at 3.5%, which is in line with our portfolio quality standards in Peru. After a challenging 2024, Banco Compartamos Peru has recovered faster than expected, achieving a 9% portfolio growth in local currency with a strong quality. This performance has been translated into a net profit of $45 million in the first nine months. A truly remarkable, remarkable comeback. ConCrédito also continues to grow consistently and at the same time, YASTAS and Aterna continue supporting our credit and saving customers to provide them a wider and more convenient product offer. Aterna, by the way, is already serving 16 million active insurance clients and continues to strengthen our value proposition in both Mexico in Peru. Another highlight this quarter is that diversification of our revenue base. We have evolved from being a primary group lending product organization to a multi-product company offering a broader portfolio of financial solutions. Today, in addition to the revenue generated by AI by our group lending products, individual loan is growing in the mix as well as ConCrédito. And as we have pointed out, insurance products have grown to 11% of the total interest income. With this strong performance, we expect to close 2025. On a very positive note, fully aligned with our latest guidance and that positions can data for an excellent start to 2026. Now let me talk about 2026 and our expectations. Looking ahead, we see that next year is going to be a very strong year in terms of the opportunity, and we will continue our momentum both in Mexico and Peru. We will share more detail guidance for you in the beginning of the year in February, as we always do, but based on our current trends and the solid progress of our transformation plan, we are confident that Cantera will continue to grow at double digit rates. There are three key drivers behind our strong performance. First, a market of clients who continue to find real value in our products that help them grow their businesses. Second, can Theta's strong leadership and trusted position in the market we serve. And third, our transformation strategy, which is expanding our range of products and services while improving convenience, productivity and efficiency. As we have shared before with this chart, we are currently executing over than 300 strategic initiatives across our business units, each one focused on adding value to our customers. One of the most significant initiatives is the rollout of our digital platform for credit process management in Mexico and in Peru. This initiative has already delivered 20% improvement in productivity within our individual credit operations over the past two years. For the group lending in Mexico, deployment is still underway and we expect to see the full impact over the next 24 months as the platform reaches full scale and maturity. As you can see, we are closing 2025 with excellent results, and then we will enter 2026 with a strong momentum and great optimism. Cantera today is more diversified, more efficient and better position than ever to keep delivering sustainable growth and long term value to our clients and each of our stakeholders. With that, I will conclude my remarks and hand it over to Mario Langarica, our CFO, who will share more details on our financial performance. Thank you very much. Thank you, Enrique, and good day to everyone. As always, we appreciate your interest in Cantera. As Enrique mentioned in his remarks, we are very excited about the continuous and consistent results that we have achieved during the years. We are enthusiastic and motivated with these positive dynamics, and we expect flows from the year with possible positive trends going forward. As of September, we can reach a historic record of 6.350 million 6,350,000 people using our financial services, representing an increase of around 650,000 people and 11.4% growth compared to 3 to 24. As we have explained in past conference calls, the modernization initiatives that we have started in past years are bringing better than expected results that have allowed him data to reach a new record long portfolio of $87.8 billion, representing a 16.4% annual growth compared to Q 24. In Mexico, both Banco Compartamos and ConCrédito have reported annual growth around 20% in the respective loan books, and in Compartamos Peru, we have initiated growth while improving our operation, our asset quality and our profitability levels. As we have signaled before, we expect to grow the consolidated loan portfolio for Cantera within the range guided more around 15% for 2025. Now, regarding each specific line of our income statement can tell us accumulated interest income amounted to $35 billion in the nine month period, with a solid 21.1% growth compared to the same period in 2020 and 2024 for the same period. Financing expenses only increased 1%, mainly driven by the reduction of referring interest rates. And even after considering the growth in the funding of our loan portfolio. Net interest income grew 24.3% and Nim amounted to 40.8%, above our expectation for the year. Asset quality has been stable during the year and better than originally expected, both in Mexico and in Peru, can tell us. Consolidated NPLs amounted to 3.42% and cost of risk to 13.3 in 2025, and for the nine month period of the year, cost of risk amounted to 12.5, compared to 12.7 in 2024. And we expect to end the year with a cost of risk around 12.5 better than the level of 13% originally guided. It is important to consider that we expect to reach this annual level, even considering the heavy rains in Mexico recently. As we have done in previous catastrophic and natural disaster events in the past. Together with Fundación Compartamos, we have activated our emergency and contingency plans to help and support our customers and employees in the areas that have been impacted. And Terra Street View 25 provision for loan losses amounted to $2.85 billion, a 14.6% growth, which is an adequate increase considering a larger loan portfolio and needs. Nim after provision for 3.25 amounted to 30.6% compared to 28.6 in Q2 24, which is also better than our original expectations for 2025. For the nine month period, Nim after provisions stood at 29.9%, which is in line with the new expectations of the year. Net fees amounted to 1.50 to $1.5 billion in 2025, compared with 1.17 billion in 2024, representing a 29.5% annual growth. These fees, as explained before, have been mostly driven by better than expected results of our insurance business that represent around 90% of the commissions collected. Now, considering net fees for the nine month period that stood at $4.3 billion, representing a 39.4, a percentage zero. Operational expenses for 2025 amounted to 6.08 billion, representing a 25.3% growth of 324. This load again is mainly explained by a larger number of employees. The varying of compensation associated with our solid growth, strategic initiatives and investments that are making him a more productive, efficient and profitable. We expect expenses to grow around 20% for the full year as we kept signal in our previous conference call goals. Most of these incremental expenses are productive expenses. On this quarter, you will notice a higher than average effective tax rate that is mainly related to ConCrédito subsidiary's subsidiaries. Corporate restructure that we announced last year. Specifically refers to one of deferred taxes events that, if we take off, would have resulted in a very similar net income figure for ConCrédito compared to set 25 around $300 million. ConCrédito is performing strongly and in line with our expectations. In 2025, net income amounted to $2.156 billion, growing 23% compared to 3 to 24 entities controlling participation of net income between 225 amounted to 2.099 billion, representing an EPs of $1.31 and $0.33 27.5% above 324 EPs as of September 25th. Accumulated net income amounted to $6.485 billion, the highest nine month figure in our history and already higher than the net income generated in 2024. After these strong results, we expect to finalize the year at the high end of our EPs guidance A, which is 5.15 A, around 36% higher than our 2024 EPs of 3.80 Intelx. Controlling ROE for 3.8 25 amounted to 25.5%, which remains above our original expectation for the year and for the nine month period, it stood at 25.9%. Very important to highlight that our three credit subsidiaries are showing ROA ratios for the nine month period of 2025, above 20%. This strong results have been achieved, mainly maintaining solid and healthy liquidity levels. Strong and diverse access to funding sources, and a robust capitalization in Gentera and each of its subsidiaries. To conclude my remarks. As you have seen from our three key results, we continue delivering as promised, and we expect to keep attaining double digit growth in loan portfolio in the coming quarters while generating solid growth in total revenues, with another cost of risk and operational expenses growing below total income. Generating a generator to keep positive jobs that should allow us to keep continue generating strong levels of profitability. That is all for my remarks. Thank you for your attention. We can now move forward to the Q&A session. Thank you. We'll now be conducting a question and answer session. If you would like to ask a question. Please use the Raise your Hand button of your zoom tool. Our first question comes from Brian Flores of Citi. Please go ahead. Hi, Tim. Good morning. Thank you for for the opportunity. Marianne, I have a I have two questions. The first one is kind of a bit obvious. You you you're presenting here the guidance. You also mentioned in 2026 you'll be growing at double digit rates. Just wanted to confirm. Is this the loan book ? Is this the earnings ? Is it both. And then you seem to be going well above the guidance. So just a question on what is holding you back in terms of revisions. Why not update ? According to our numbers, the net income on the fourth quarter would need to decrease by double digit to reach the top of the guidance. So just a bit on if you could expand a bit on on your cautious stance. And then a second question on margins. I think you mentioned, Mario, an expansion on margins that are going very well. It seems like they you have higher yields on assets, you have a lower cost of funding. So just how do you envision this going into 2026 ? How should we picture this ? I know you've been making a lot of efforts with new different sources of funding. So if you could expand a bit on this trend going forward, it would be really helpful. Thank you. Thank you very much, Ryan. Of course. Yeah. The guidance, the double digit growth refers to a bold the the the book, the loan book and and the EPs. We will provide obviously the guidance in in in February. But the idea is that we will have double digit growth in our plan for next year in both in both items regarding the guidance for year end in the last quarter, we're expecting a higher expenses and we are analyzing some strategic initiatives. That's why we're keeping the the, the, the, the guidance at the front end of or of what we have already published a regarding margins going forward that will also be provided with more detail in February. As you know, we have a a this changing mix in the portfolio that will be the driver for the projections of margins next year. But as we have seen as at this point, we expect for this year in Nim around 40 and after provisions around 30, and more detailed information will be provided in February for next year. Well thank you. Super helpful. And regarding access to funding. Yes, Brian, as you sign out, we have very good access to funding in the different local debt capital markets both in Mexico and Peru with development banks, with commercial banks and multilateral also in Mexico. We recently issued a new long term bond, and it was very, very successful. I mean, pension funds, different investors participated. But media is very good access in general. So thank you. Thank you. Our next question comes from Eric Itoh of Bradesco. Please go ahead. Hi Enrique, Mario and Enrique Barrera, I thank you for the opportunity. Today's question and congrats on the results. I have to hear from my side as well. The first one I more on the macro side. That was the economic package announced last month, which included changes to the Ipab and some changes the write off. So just if you could share some initial thoughts on what could be the impact from for for for you guys from these changes. So that's the first one and the second one just going back to to ConCrédito. Right. You mentioned there was some impacts from deferred tax events, which I believe the tax rate should not be this higher going forward. So just want to confirm that. But also if I look specifically for the operating expenses for ConCrédito, there was a relevant increase in this quarter. I just want to understand if this is also related to the corporate structure, and if you could see it maybe normalizing going forward, because I think that that was one of the main drivers that impacted the net income contraction for ConCrédito. Thank you. Thank you. Yeah. Thank you very much. Yeah. Well ehm, yes. Regarding the the tax reform they have effect is going to be marginal for us. It's small given the fact that we have smaller percentage of deposits on our balance sheet, and that probably would be around between 40 and $50 million on the right of there's still a specific rules to be published by the Secretariat Hacienda. But if if we took it as the general rule, if that will not necessarily be an impact on neither the accounting nor financial in terms, it would be more a matter of deferring the deduction of the of the guide offs. But we are still waiting for the specific rules for banks. And when we have that information we can we could provide more detail. But, but but it would not be that the deductions are eliminated. It would just be a matter of when you can apply the deduction. Okay. Thank you. And for for ConCrédito. I'm sorry. Sorry. Yeah. For ConCrédito. Yes. The increase in expenses. It's it's completely related to the deferred taxes that I just described before. We which we should expect going forward, that the effective tax rate for ConCrédito should be moving around 30%. Okay. Yeah. Just one here on the OpEx. Still, if I look at your hirings total right hirings, they have decelerated compared to the previous years. Right. But still, if you look here to date, you're still with A11 thousand new hirings. I just want to understand if for for 2026 we could still see more hirings going going forward. Or if you're maybe getting close to your optimized level of workforce, just to understand how much we can capture in efficiency gains. We obviously we are in in a growth mode in, in, in, in, in ConCrédito and also in the bank, as you have seen as you know, our model is hybrid. So we will be hiring people as it makes sense given our objectives to grow the portfolio. But remember always that these hirings are always have multiplying effect on revenues. If we hire more people, we expect that other sales cost to have a multiplying effect on revenue. So so so while we will obviously announce you in February, the specific objectives for next year okay. Perfect. Thank you. Thank you so much. Our next question comes from Ernesto Gabilondo of Bank of America. Please go ahead. Thank you. Hi. Good morning Enrique, Mario and Enrique. Thanks for the opportunity to ask questions and congrats on your strong third quarter results. My first question will be on on the recent floods. I just wondering if you have evaluated the potential impact on long road asset quality, temporary closed branches, as you mentioned, if we included this impact, the cost of raise for the year should be around 12.5%. But if you can give further details will be highly appreciated. My second question is a follow up on opex growth. So you were mentioning that you are evaluating expenses related to the digital transformation in last quarter. So so just wondering how should we think about the opex growth for this year ? And for my last question is related to your long term ROE is making the numbers. Your ROE is already at 2,425% this year. So so just thinking how should we think about it ? Profitability levels. You were saying before that at some point you will start to reward clients with rebates in order to keep clients loyal team and then strong asset quality and remain as the most competitive offering in the low income segment. But at the same time, you also have been evaluating the possibility to increase dividend payments. So I will appreciate your initial thoughts on how you're thinking about the profitability. Thank you. Thank you very much. And yeah, well, unfortunately, as as you know, the geography of both Mexico and Peru bring us every year some heavy impacts, mostly with rain and and and winds and hurricanes. So a obviously a as I said, we have a contingency and emergency plans to support our clients and our and our and our employees in, in these areas. All of that obviously is always included in, in our expectations and our provisions for the year. So this specific event is now hitting hard around 1% of our clients and our 1% of the portfolio. But that doesn't mean that the 1% will be a write off. It's it's usually it's a fraction of that. And we're still evaluating. But but again, we don't we don't expect any any impact on on what we have already guided for for customers for the year. And a it's very important for you to, to, to, to, to, to take into account that we are very well prepared to assist our clients when these events happened. Regarding what this growth I mean, we have said it, it's 20% what we expect. So just if you make the math, we will you will have what is for the last quarter. And yes, it's not only the strategic initiatives related to to the digital transformation. There are several initiatives that we're evaluating. And that's why we're keeping the the open road at that level. As as mentioned, regarding long term ROE. Well, we have accomplished this through this, this quarter. Important a, a benchmarks that we said in the past which one was to be a with a narrow about 22% and the other was bringing back our subsidiaries to ROE is about 20. And that is very important. Having said this, this allows us to think strategically of what we want to do going forward in, in different items. And we have said the first one is to make sure that we have sufficient capital to support our growth, and that could also include some improvement in pricing. As you mentioned going forward. The second, obviously, is this capital should help us to analyze potential inorganic initiatives that would help us to accelerate our long term strategy objectives. And the next one then, is to keep an maintain stable dividend payout policy. All of these were analyzed in detail because we can achieve these results, and we will provide you a more clear picture of what we're going to do going forward in February. Perfect. Thank you very much, Mario. And congrats again. Thank you. Our next question comes from Tito Labarta of Goldman Sachs. Please go ahead. Hi. Excuse me. Hi. Good morning. Thanks for the call. And taking my question a couple questions also. I guess first on your fee income remains very strong, particularly the insurance fees. Just to think how you think about the sustainability of the growth, should that begin to moderate, or how much more room you think you have to to to penetrate on the insurance and support fee income growth and then just following up on on the provisioning levels ? Maria, I think you said 12.5 this year, but just thinking maybe longer term you expect to remain around this 12.5. In the past it's been closer to 13. Just maybe thinking longer term cost of risk should be around that 12.5 to 13 level or any changes from there. Thank you. Papito this Enrique, in terms of the fees, I mean, the net growth in net fees should be moving around 20% for this year and going forward should be moving more in line with the with the growth of the portfolio. No. So if next year is in mid-teens, should be moving in that range ? No. Pretty much in line with that. Regarding cost. Of risk. Yeah. Well, as you remember for this year, we originally guided 13% based on the expectations for the for the mix of the portfolio basically. And we have achieved excellent results particularly well in both in both more products both in Mexico and Peru. And this also has to do with all the investments that we have done in the past to improve our data analysis and our risk scoring, etcetera. Using the modernization tools that we have implemented. Having said this, m a probably for next year, something similar to the 13% would be something that we would probably be be thinking about, but we're just building our 2026 plan and we are ay ay ay ay ay ay, adjusting the model. And and we will provide you a specific cost of risk guidance for next year. But but having said that, at this point we think it should move between around 30%. Okay. Very clear. Thanks, Mario. Thanks, Enrique. Our next question comes from Carlos Gomez Lopez of HSBC. Please go ahead. Hello and good morning and congratulations on the results. I wanted to follow up on the what possible strategic initiatives you might have. And you have mentioned inorganic growth. And I have to say that that kind of concerns me because I thought you you had kind of forsworn that for a while. What are you looking that you might be missing in your group as it is today in the second. Yeah. Sorry, sorry. The second. A more technical question. You are paying the second dividend of the year to $1.2 billion in November. If I recall correctly, it is already out of your equity account or it will come out in the fourth quarter. I know it's a bit technical. Thank you. Okay. Sorry. No. Yeah. Maybe I, I need to explain what I said is that there capital accumulation that we are seeing and we expect going forward should allow us to maintain our organic growth. We are we will be reviewing in the future going forward. If there could be some inorganic acquisitions that could make sense for the strategy. But not not that, not that this at this point, I was talking more in general, following the question of resto of how we see this capital accumulation in the future. So, so, so excited about sorry about the the confusion. Yes. And maybe Carlos, this is this is Enrique. This is a very strategic and important point. So let me just build on what already Mario said. But we realize that our level of capitalization is growing strong. Actually, we have reached this levels before than expected. And this is a very good news. And this will allow us to have flexibility on defining different strategies in the use of this capital, so we could improve the pricing of our customers, or we can make any other use of it. But we want to analyze this very carefully, very strategically with our team and make the best decision. So in any case, when it comes the time, we will let you know. All right. Thank you. And that's the long term. Then in the short term sorry. You have again possible higher expenses. You have explained about technology. What else do you have that you might be spending money on, on the on the fourth quarter ? Because again, you have, you know, your first three quarters have been so stable that it's kind of puzzling that you, you are guiding us to, to a low of Q4. Yeah, mostly it would be the incentives that we're going to pay for year end. A been giving the very strong performance that we have had in all the subsidiary. But doesn't let me understand that this incentives like for employees rather than borrowers. Right. Yeah. Okay. Very clear. Thank you. And Carlos, regarding the the dividend that you were signaling, I mean, the 2.4 billion dividends that that is going to pay in, in two exhibitions were authorized in April in the shareholders meeting. So it was reflected in that month, in April when the shareholders authorized a dividend. Okay. So the so the dividend is, is is already recorded in equity but not distributed. Exactly, exactly. Okay. That is correct Berkeley. Thank you so much. Thank you governor. Again if you'd like to ask a question, please use the Raise your Hand button of your zoom tool. Our next question comes from Juan Dominguez of Onyx Equity Management. Please go ahead. Hi, guys. Can you hear me ? Yes, yes, yes. Thank you so much for the opportunity. And very impressive how the business has evolved over the past years, despite all the challenges that you have gone through. So again, congratulations on the very strong delivery that you once again showed. Just a couple of questions on my side. First, on on OpEx, you are guiding for 2025, the growth of 20% year over year. You already mentioned that a lot of it is due to the variable compensation that you are paying to the loan officers. Of course, results are very strong, better than what you initially were expecting at the beginning of the year. So I'm wondering how are you think about the incentive packages for for the next year ? Are you going to make life a bit tougher for your loan officers going forward just to to to make them earn bonuses perhaps next year ? And second, I know you have been a piloting acquiring services for especially for your individual client base. So you are starting to offer POS devices for them. You have any early results to share with us on on on that specific strategy. Okay. Okay. Okay. First, regarding the OpEx and the incentives, we have a very. A very well defined a formula for paying incentives that has worked cost well. And obviously we will every year we put a high, high objective for our for our sales force. And and they reach it. So the formula is very well adapted. And and it touches the different if you want pnl lines of, of their, of their specific objective, which is bringing new new clients, bringing a higher portfolio, and obviously maintaining asset quality and cost of risk are very good levels. So, I mean, if we will put higher and, and, and, and higher objectives, but if they reach it we will pay accordingly, you know, and that's our promise. And then the regarding the pose question. Yeah. Can you elaborate a little bit more about the second question ? Because I don't get which pilot you're referring to, right. Yeah. I guess this is coming from a previous conversation with you guys. You mentioned that you are starting for your individual clients. You're assigned to offer, like the small payment devices. Right ? iOS devices is just just to see how it goes. I know it's very small, but I'm just wondering how how you see the results of that. Yeah. Well, probably a little confusion there. A a what what we have said is that we have policies on our YASTAS points where we have the strategy of, of, of allowing our YASTAS partners to disperse and collect and make the payments of different financial services. And that's where we have the POS devices that complement our YASTAS strategy. And some of those clients, some of those YASTAS points can be individual clients. So probably at some point in our some conversation, we we probably explained something that. Okay, so so it's more more like an overlapping of the client base rather than a new thing that you are trying to do. Exactly, exactly the it's related to the gas network. Okay. Understood. Thank you guys. And again congratulations on the results. Thank you for. Thank you. There are no further questions at this time. I would like to hand the floor back over to management for closing comments. Thank you. Before we end the call, Enrique Barrera made me realize that in my opening remarks, I miss communicate the results. When I was referring to the accumulated net income in the last nine months of this year. So what I wanted to say, and this is a disclaimer, is that net income grew from 44, $45 million in 2024. I'm talking about the first nine months of nine, 2024 to 189 million solids in the same time, or the the same period, nine months of the 2025. So I just wanted to clarify this. I know you have the numbers in the our press release, but sorry about that. And and thank you for for your interest. Thank you for your time in this call. I will just end by emphasizing or talking again about our 35th anniversary. We are very happy that this September we made 35 years working and doing everything we can every day for our customers since 1990. And you have been a very, very important part of of this effort and this goal and this mission that we have. So thank you for your support. Thank you for being with us, and let's celebrate together. Thank you so much. With this concludes the conference of today. You may now disconnect.
